As we discussed by phone, I am sending you a small supply of employees with respect to foreign travel. Please continue to provide full details on such travel, attaching a detailed itinerary and points of contact. I am told by the Office of Security, which chops off on these requests, that they would like to be advised three weeks in advance of any foreign travel. I recognize the fact that this may be a problem in some cases, but let's do our best to adhere to that policy.

I am pleased to learn of your forthcoming marriage; but, I will miss working with you as I found you to be a completely agreeable and helpful individual to deal with. Also, as we discussed, it would be nice to meet with you and your replacement in my office before you leave. It doesn't look like I will be getting any leave for any time in the future, so I am sure that a one-day notice of your visit will be fine with me.

With expressions of every good wish,

Sincerely,

STAT

Deputy Chief, Administrative Staff
